

Jackie Johnson

I'm a third Generation Washingtonian, Harlean and David Young; my parents have been married over fifty years. My siblings include two sisters, Deborah and Antionette and the only male in the brood, David Jr. I have been blessed with one child, Terrence he and Nicole have given me the pleasure of becoming a grandmother; they gave me T.J, the new man in my life. I attended

Randle Highland Elementary School, where I learned to read. Sousa Middle School where I learned to love reading and Anacostia High School, where I learned to write. D.C. public schools gave me an excellent foundation for writing. I also attended University of the District of Columbia, Prince George's Community College and University Maryland, College Park. I currently hold and Degree in accounting.

I have owned several businesses in Washington, D.C. area. The entrepreneurial spirit hit me early and hard and I welcomed the challenge. The most recent and most successful were, Vogue Hair Studio and Vogue Day Spa.

I'm single and satisfied. My friends and family have supported me through my many endeavors. Doris and Calvin have had the misfortune of being my friend, not an easy job but somebody has to have it. Last but not least is my voice of reason, Aunt Beverly.

Though, "Web of Deception" is my début novel. I have written several unpublished works. I began writing at the age of ten. I later developed my skills by writing short stories and poems. My favorite author is Toni Morrison. I am currently working on "Seduction"; it will be available in the Spring.
